Feb 3, 2014 I have a new Idea, if i can get it going, then what the heck... i could put a SIM card to my tablet that communicates via bluetooth... your sim wont even need a sim... your tablet would be the "server". Nov 6, 2012 Read the FAQ first: nhasp.exe is part of my installation and runs in my XP SP2 (I use the 32 bit version) I have looked everywhere and never found a way to stop it, to any suggestions. Apr 21, 2011 You have 2 choices. 1)Use your registered serial number and have a sim and turn on the 'SIM' button in the window and select the serial number. OR.. 2)Reinstall your sim card. This has worked for several people here. Follow the instructions in the read me file. Do the following steps: NOTE: This assumes you are connected to a Microsoft Windows XP compatible network. a.) Launch the Network Setup GUI. b.) Click on Add. c.) Click on Connection to Network Hardware. d.) Select 'Other'. e.) Type in 192.168.1.1 as the IP address. f.) Select 'Connect to' from the network name, and 'Specify Local IP Address' then enter 192.168.1.1 as the IP address. g.) Type in the network name with dashes and dots. i.) Click next. j.) Type in the IP address of the mastercam server in the box with the ip address. k.) Type in the subnet mask in the box with the subnet mask l.) Click'startup'. m.) Add a new device, select 'other', and make sure the IP address of the mastercam server is the IP address on which it is plugged in to the LAN port. n.) Expand the'more details' tab, and make sure 'Name' and 'Name Type' is set to 'Computer name'. o.) Expand 'Connection type', and select 'Connection Type' as 'direct connection' and make sure 'default: LAN' is selected. p.) Click 'ok'. q.) Click 'ok'. r.) Select 'browse network' and navigate to the folder with the smult.ini and smult.exe. s.) Double click smult.ini. This is where the license information for the server
